PRODUCT NOTES

Please note that in order to get the correct traditional zellige effect these tiles should have as tight joints as possible. These tiles are not manufactured in an industrial manner, but using highly traditional, ancient North African processes by artisans. The tiles will vary in size, thickness and contain occasional lumps and uneven areas in the tile body as a result. The glaze varies in thickness, giving a dappled tonal effect where the tile body colour glazes through the glaze colour. Chips in the glaze are not a defect but part of the desired effect on the product- as these tiles are chipped to size by hand, which also give them their distinctive recessed back edge. Many tiles will have blue pen lines visible, these lines are used to mark out the tile edges to be chipped too. This should be wiped away with a cloth before grouting.
